From a Marsh to a Flourishing Town in a Few Months.

WHAT A RAILROAD IS DOING

Thrift and Enterprise Apparent. A Visit to Beverly-Historic Grounds-Graphic Letter.

ELEINS, W. Va., Nov. 16.—My first visit to Elkins, W. Va., was early last pring. It was then a town in name only, the proposed site being a level, among the hills. The surveyors had just finished their work in laying it off in streets and town lots, and already the real estate and boom agent was there, and corner lots and desirable business locations were being sold and specu-lated in with an activity that would lated in with an activity that would have done credit to any western State. There were only some half dozen houses and one or two stores in the place belonging to old residents, but the speculative element that always follow any new enterprise had come in with the railroad operations, and foundations were laid for a number of new stores, desclibers of the stores, desclibers the stores, desclibers the stores of the stores.

were laid for a number of new stores, dwellings, etc.

The West Virginia railroad was still some miles away, but grading had been completed up to the town, and gangs of men were busily at work laying tracks, etc., and gave the place a very animated appearance. Stretched along the road-side were tents, huts, mud houses and buildings of all descriptious—anything that would give shelter where the itnians and other laborers employed on the railroad had their quarters, and after a cold uncomfortable drive by stage from Belington, to which point I had come by the Grafton & Greenbrier railroad, the outlook did not seem very cheerful.

A GREAT CHANGE.

A GREAT CHANGE, Upon this, my second visit, I was surprised to find what a change had takes place in a few months. Elkins is now a town of fally 300 inhabitants. The railroad laads you at their handsome new depot, where a 'bus meuts the train to take travelers to the hotel. A large saw and rianing mill is in operation, and a take travelers to the hotel. A large saw and planing mill is in operation, and a number of new stores have been opened and are doing a thriving business. The railroad company intend building a large workshop, and there is talk of putting up a new $10,000 hotel on a site re-erved for that purpose. The handsome new residences being built on the hillside by 8. B. Eikins and H. G. Davis are being bushed raidy to completion, and one oushed rapidly to completion, and one an hardly realize that it is the Elkins of pushed rapidly to competent, and one can hardly realize that it is the Elkins of six months ago.

The average citizen believes in the future of the town, and expects before long that it will be one of the largest and most important in the interior of the State. It will, no doubt, flourish, as it has a good territory to draw from, and is the nearest railroad point for a very large section of country, but there are two serious objections to it as a place of residence. It is swampy and there is a scarcity of good water. However, a good system of drainage, which has already been commenced, will do away with the former to a great extent. The surrounding scenery is very beautiful and well worth a trip over the West Virginia Central to see.

A telephone line, connecting it with St. George and other points is contemplated and they have already the luxury (anknown in that section heretofore) of sending and receiving telegraphic mes-

ending and receiving telegraphic mes

From here the state—driven by that very clever fellow, Page Buckey, took us to Beverly, six miles distant. The roads were badly cut up through so much timber having been hailed over them the past summer. Of course they were mudly, they always are, and a drizzling rain which was falling added to the discomforts of the drive.

It was almost eight o'clock when we arrived, cold and wet, in Beverly, and stopped at the 'Buckey House.' Here, however, a good warm supper, put up in the style for which Mrs. Buckey is noted, soon puts the traveler in a better frame of mind, and reconciles him to his situation. Mine host Buckey is quite a character, and after supper I his situation. Mine host Buckey is quite a character, and after supper I drew up a chair before the large open fire-place in the hotel office, and listened to his unfailing supply of stories. He has lived in Beverly all his life, and no matter how good a yarn may be told of a day's hunt or tramp over the mountain, he can always cap it with something better.

There is some historic ground in this part of the State. Near here was fought the battle of Rich Mountain and skirm-lahes were a matter of daily occurrence. Beverly itself was occupied several times by both the Union and Confederations.

times by both the Union and Confederate forces, and the Inhabitants, when they retired at night, were never sure whether they would wake up under the stars and Stripes or the Confederate flag. The sympathizers with North and South seem to have been pretty evenly divided. One gentleman, who served with the Southern forces, told me that once he was with a small force on a foraging expedition, and as they were about to camp for the night they were shout to camp for the night they were supprised by a force of Union soldiers, and only escaped capture by taking to the woods. After the war was over and he had returned home, he learned that his cousin had been in command of the party which had so nearly captured them.

However, Beverly is quiet and peaceful enough now, and court week or a circus is the only excitement they experience from one year's end to the other.

perience from one year's end to the other.

I firmly believe it rains all the time there, at least it always has been during my visits, and I was told it had rained almost every day for the past twelve months, and that the only place they have seen dust is on a covered bridge which crosses the river, and they look apon it as quite a curiosity. Possibly, however, this is only a yarn which they tell to a "tenderfoot." w.
